Ally The Giant Alpaca

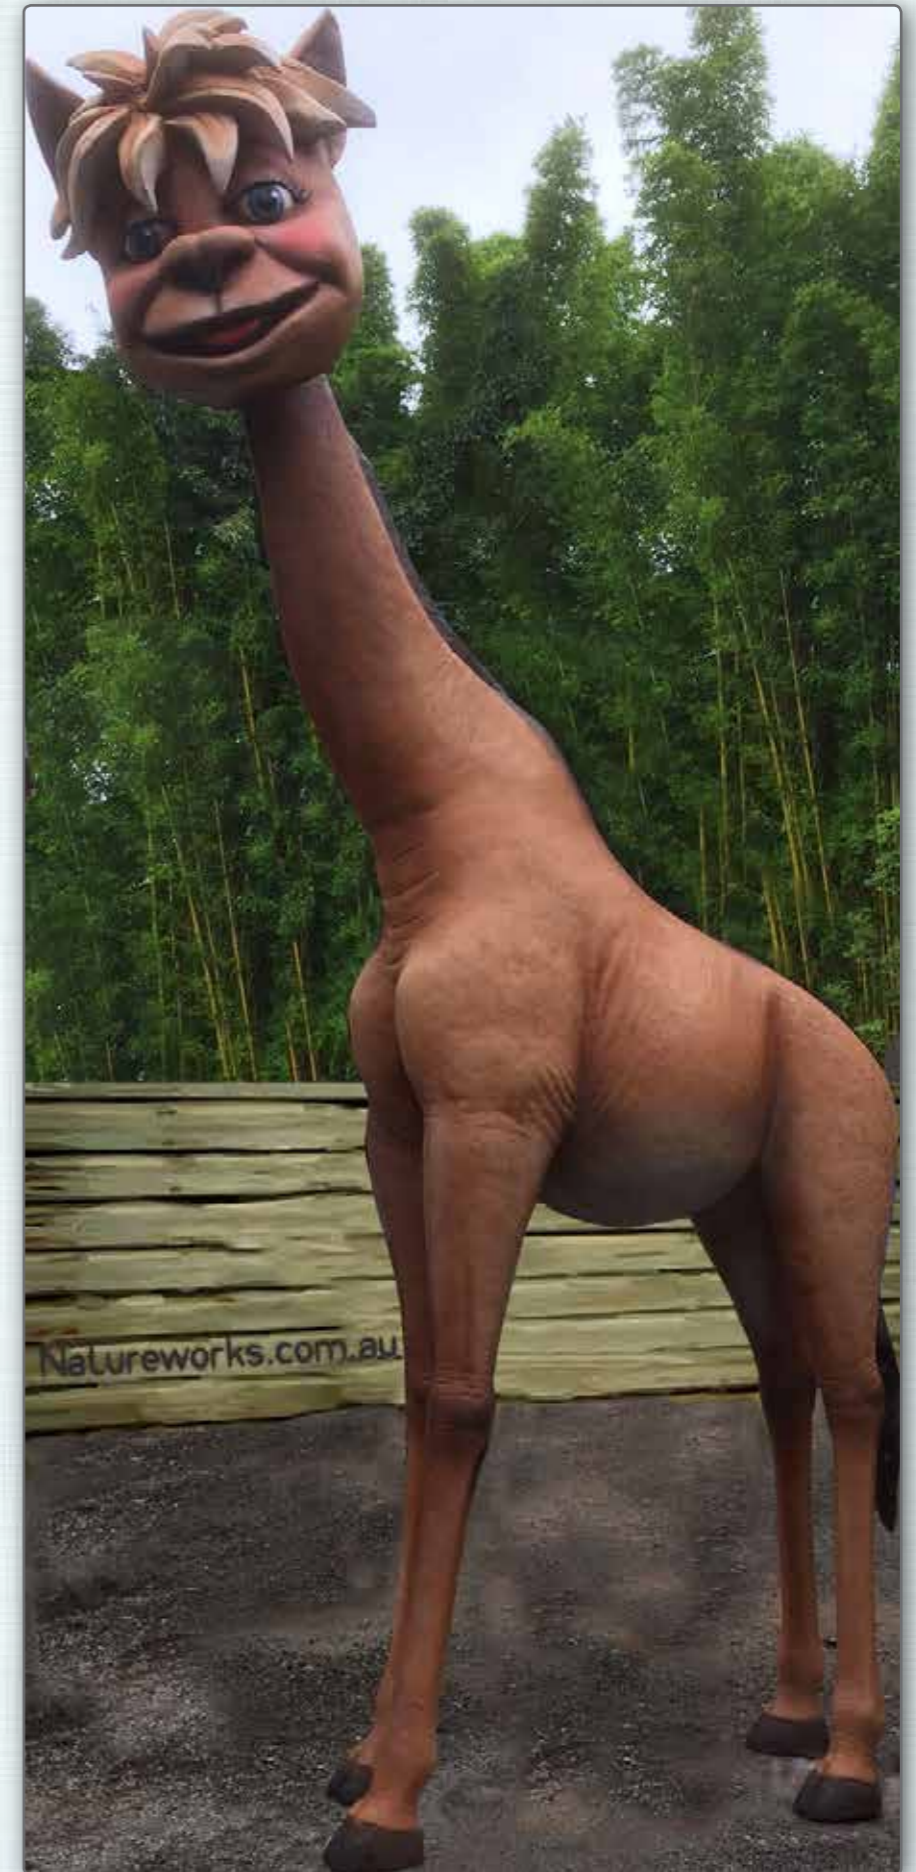

Ally the Alpaca - 18ft

"He Who whispers Down a Well About The Goods He Has To Sell, Will Never Make As Many Dollars As He Who Climbs A Tree And HOLLARS!"

Recently Ally's Kindy near Ipswich asked for Natureworks' help to put them "on the map".

We started by taking their logo, and sculpted its head as a larger than life version of their logo, which was a cartoon character of a friendly alpaca. We then morphed its head onto our 6 metre giraffe body and gave it a repaint.

Ally stands in the driveway and can be seen from afar. Friendly "Ally" the Alpaca now greets the children at the entry of Ally's Kindy everyday.

Largest Dinosaur in the World - 2002 - 20m tall & 40 m long

David Joffe was engaged not as the creative director to develop this project but as the technical director to enlarge this dreadful model to gigantic proportions so it could lay claim to being the biggest dinosaur in the world. It was built in pieces in the Philippines and shipped in 10 x 40ft containers to Drumheller, Calgary, Canada where it was erected.

“I was appalled when told that after much discussions, the client had approved this pathetic T-Rex toy like model”. I was told to shut up and just make it bigger.”

Stage 1 - Finding a model

Over one million dollars later, the finished dinosaur is as shitty as the original model.

Matilda the Kangaroo

Giant Matilda Kangaroo - 9 metres Tall

The original Matilda stood at 12 metres tall and made her debut at the Commonwealth Games in 1988. She was the star of the show, but was never designed and fabricated so as to weather the elements and the passage of time.

She was stored away in a paddock and forgotten about for some years before being bought by the Matilda Petrol Station Group in about 2007.

They spent well over $100,000 to renovate her and relocated this icon to their signature servo north of Gympie, where she now resides hidden from the passing traffic in the new roadhouse sold by the Matilda Fuel Group to the new owners "PUMA" who relinquished their connection with the kangaroo.

Prior to the sale Matilda Group intended to use this ICONIC figure as their mascot, to reside over their vision for what was to be hundreds of Matilda service stations Australia-wide.

Natureworks Pty Ltd a specialist art fabrication company in Highvale (nr Samford) north of Brisbane was engaged to re-design a slimmer version without losing the spirit of the original sculpture.

The rear end of the original roo was over 4.2 metres wide and posed a problem for both fabrication and transport of the piece, so this width at the hips was reduced to 2.4 metres and the height to 9.0 metres, making it easy to transport. The head and ears were built as separate components and Natureworks installed the first piece at Tugun on the Gold Coast in 2009.

When negotiations for the sale of the service station group later began the fabrication of further pieces was put on hold. A year later the concept died once "PUMA" took over the group.

The Tugun fuel depot now owned by "Puma" sold the sculpture back to Natureworks who is now offering the piece for sale in Australia.

The Face Of Luna Park - Entry Statement

Stage 1 - Scaled model of Luna park Entry Statement - to present to the board

Stage 2 - Sculpting the Eye showing men working from Boom lift. - Note the enormous size of this entry statement.

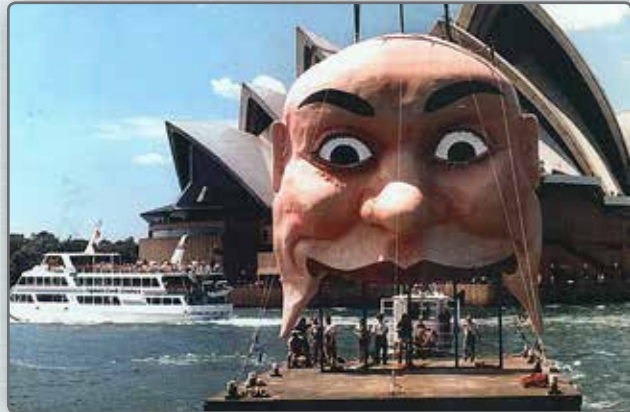

Stage 3 - Once the polystyrene sculpture was perfect, we fibreglassed a heavy duty shell over the front of the piece and then applied a coloured texture to the skin of the face. The styrene became sacrificial.

Natureworks also built the Mountain, the Giant Tumblebug and the domed minarets and many of the other hero features for the park.

Stage 4 - It was delivered by barge vertically across Sydney Harbour just for the fun of it!

Yes the photo on the barge was a publicity stunt to provide maximum attention to the re-opening of the park after years of closure.

*Does your business need a FACE LIFT? Then do what Luna Park did, they called NATUREWORKS

At over 8 metres high we realised that it had to be sculpted in a vertical position so that we could properly assess its progress from the same angle at which it would be finally displayed.

Stage 6 - Once Installed the Eyelashes were attached and side supporting pillars along with all finishing touches on site -

Twenty years later, the fibreglass one off sculpture shows no sign of wear and will last another 100 years!

Stage 5 - Delivery - Once the face was delivered it was craned into position and installed on site

In 1993, Natureworks was commissioned by the Luna Park Trust to faithfully Re-capture the exact personality of the original face. and his team of artists was chosen to re-create the most famous giant face . The result was spectacular now over 22 years and showing no wrinkles. The design and materials will last another 100 years from now and will still be as young at heart as it was when built.

The original was built with deteriorating old fashioned material which had failed the test of time. After nationwide assessment of capabilities David Joffe

Sealife Sculptures

Tropical Landscape Life Size Moais & Erupting Volcano - Smorgy's Restaurant - Melbourne

In 2015, Yeppoon City Council commissioned Natureworks to sculpt a series of sea creatures incorporating interactive water play for the central art feature of a new 'sprayground' to be constructed on the Yeppoon foreshore.

Working closely with landscape Architectural firm Vee Design, Natureworks developed an abstract interpretation of Kraken tentacles (giant octopus), a stingray, a starfish, turtles and a giant crab for the new wet playspace. Utilising a range of surface finishes, Natureworks created larger-than-life art-forms with precise mosaic patterns and a unique 3D bronze appliqué that hugs the free-flowing sculptural forms. The 3D micro-bronze patterned inlay utilised tells the story of the sea creatures fringing the coral reef off Yeppoon - the mid-QLD coastline devastated by Cyclone Marcia in February 2015.

The challenge of the Yeppoon project was to produce large wet-play sculptural icons of local significance that would meet Australian Playground Standards. The brief called for a concrete substrate with no softball, requiring the tall sculptures to be designed as unclimbable, but still inspirational and with great visual impact.

Natureworks is renowned for its exacting replication, to museum standard, of all forms of animal art; for the Yeppoon project Natureworks branched out beyond its traditional realm of realism and ventured into the world of abstract contemporary art.

Each sculpture created for the sprayground was designed with a 75-year lifespan. They incorporate stainless steel armatures and reinforced heavy duty polymer-modified 75mpa concrete, to withstand strong weather conditions. The solid forms were then overlaid with a bronze sea-life appliqué and colourful mosaics to provide a spectacular surface finish. The hero piece of the Yeppoon series is the 'Keppel Kraken'. At a height of 4m this central sculpture towers over the other elements, periodically dumping an avalanche of water over the unsuspecting children below. An additional series of intermittent spray and jumping jets of water add more surprises and a ton of fun

Product Details:-The original piece for the National Botanical Gardens was not painted but was negatively coloured in a buildup of semi-translucent gelcoat layers, which was then heavily reinforced with fibreglass whilst still in its silicone mould. This Technique "bakes" the colour deep into the laminate and is a superior finish to traditionally painted fibreglass sculptures. It is made from fibreglass and has an internal steel armature.

Giant Thylacine (Thylacinus cynocephalus)

This 3 x larger than life Tasmanian Tiger or (Thylacinus Cynocephalus) was commission by the Launceston City Council as a playground feature in 2014.

Thylacinus Potens the "powerful thylacine" was a larger and more heavily built ancestor of the modern thylacine, but nowhere near as big as the sculpture below.

In developing this piece, we ensured that it was built to Australian standards and is a heavily steel reinforced sculpture in fibreglass.

It is now a centre piece for the Launceston Park in Tasmania - This sculpt also provides an education based play experience of the unique megafauna of Tasmania that has only become extinct in the last 50 years.

Natureworks can custom build almost anything, so if you are thinking about a unique sculpture for a playground contact Natureworks on 07 3289 7555 or www.natureworks.com.au.

Tree of Life - Sopoong Shopping Centre - South Korea - 2006

What an achievement!

In 2006 Natureworks was contracted to build the largest indoor artificial tree on the planet. It was to grow through the atrium space of 6 floors of retail shopping in the largest shopping centre in Asia, reaching a height of 32 metres at the ceiling where the trunk still had a diameter of 6 metres. At ground level the 11 metre diameter featured a walk through "cave". The tree weighs 30 tonnes and includes 12 primary branches weighing an average of 1800kg each.

The clients' intent was to lay claim to building the largest artificial tree in the world. It is over 11 metres in diameter at the base, through which the public can walk and the diameter where it "breaks through" the ceiling is still 6 metres wide.
