THORNY DEVIL - ON BASE PLATE

This 3m long Thorny Devil sculpture is magnificent! It makes a powerful statement.

Natureworks has brought to life this 26 times life size sculpture. Revealing its striking colourings that blend with its environment and its "fake" head behind its neck to trick its predators makes this unique desert dwelling reptile a remarkable creature to be admired.

Natureworks is renowned for meticulous attention to detail, form and structure. The confidence in Natureworks expertise in creating 3D sculptures was why it was commissioned by the Australian National Botanical Gardens in Canberra as a centre piece for their Red Centre Exhibit. It provides an educational playground sculpture for all to be enjoyed and creating a connection with the wonders of the natural world.

This sculpture has been negatively coloured in a buildup of semi-translucent gelcoat layers, which was then heavily reinforced with fibreglass whilst still in its silicone mould. This technique "bakes" the colour deep into the laminate and is a superior finish to traditionally painted fibreglass sculptures. The fibreglass has been reinforced with an internal steel armature to aid in its strength and durability. The spikes have been rounded off to a 6mm radius to make child friendly toe and foot holds for children to crawl and climb on.

This 3 metre long Thorny Devil is a new addition to the National Botanical Gardens in Canberra for the new Red Centre Exhibit - October 2013
